Farm Land Needs Draining

There were on January 1, 1920, 185,831 acres of farm land in Delaware provided with artificial drainage, according to figures from the 1920 census, announced recently by the Bureau of the Census.

There were at the time of taking of the fourteenth census 68,969 acres of land in the State needing drainage, of which 7967 acres needed drainage only, and 61,002 acres needed drainage and clearing. The percentage of improved land in the State provided with artificial drainage was 28.5 per cent.

MIDDLETOWN SCHOOL MADE GOOD RECORD

47 Pupils Made Perfect Records and 198 Made Good Records in Attendance Last School Year

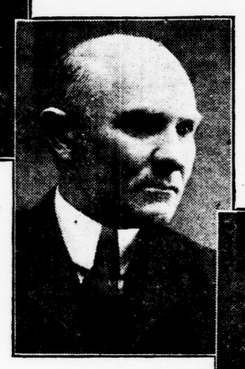
AN EXCEPTIONALLY STRONG FACULTY FOR TERM 1921-1922

The Middletown Schools made an excellent record last year in attendance. During the year 345 pupils were enrolled; 263 in the elementary school and 82 in the high. Of this number 47 made perfect attendance records, and 198 records of good attendance, making a total of 245 who won either good or perfect attendance certificates.

The attendance for the elementary school for the year is 89.1 per cent., while the percentage for the high school is 91.0.

This is a splendid showing as compared with New Castle County, or the State as a whole, but we are not content to rest on this record of achievement.

JESSE L. SHEPHERD



MARTIN B. BURRIS

DANIEL W. STEVENS

An analysis of the facts will show how inadequate this is if we expect the school to render the greatest service possible to the youth of the district.

RELATION OF ATTENDANCE TO PROMOTION

Of the 345 pupils enrolled 274 were promoted. Of the 71 remaining, 28 were transferred to other schools, leaving 43 pupils in our system who will have to repeat their grades because they are not qualified to advance. 21 of the 43 failures are chargeable to poor attendance. To state it another way 48.8 per cent. of the failures last year were due to the fact that the children were not there enough to have a fair chance.

In 1920 the average cost to the State for keeping a pupil in school a year was $63.52. Multiply this by 43 and you will get a pretty good estimate of the cost of our failures to the State. Fifty per cent. of this in all likelihood could have been prevented had the children been kept in school regularly and to the close.

The cost to the State is small compared to the cost to the parents, which may be the earning capacity of the pupil for one year upon leaving school. The greatest cost after all, is not to the State directly, nor to the parent, but to the student who fails. He may become discouraged and stop school as soon as the law permits, enter upon a career unprepared and fail. It may mean the difference between happiness and misery to him; a difference between a home with comforts and a home without them; a difference in his earning capacity of a thousand dollars a year for forty years.

To-day we have 325 pupils in school. Is it too much for us to hope that your child may be one of three hundred to make good or perfect attendance records? With your co-operation we believe this goal can be reached.

Last year 115 children were kept out of school, 1094 days for agricultural and other work. 117 children were kept out, 292 days to make out-of-town trips or visits. 36 stayed at home or were permitted to be out of school, 155 days because of parental indifference.

While there are other causes, such as bad weather and illness, a large per cent. of the absences due to the above causes can be prevented.

Therefore, in the interest of each child and the school that is trying earnestly to serve you and your children, we ask you as parents and patrons to make every reasonable sacrifice necessary to keep your children in school regularly, and to see to it, in so far as lies within your power that each child does his or her work well.

THE SCHOOL BOARD

The local school board is composed of three of Middletown's most progressive professional and business men: Martin B. Burris, Esq., Jesse L. Shepherd and Daniel W. Stevens. These gentlemen have been identified with the affairs of the Middletown School for many years, and their business training makes them well qualified to look after the important matters pertaining to the local school.

MARTIN B. BURRIS

Martin B. Burris, Esq., President of the Middletown School Board, is a well-known member of the New Castle County bar, and is deeply interested in all educational matters in both State and County. In 1897, Mr. Burris was a member of the State Constitutional Convention and the following year was nominated by the Republican State Convention for Governor, but declined this honor to create harmony in the party and was later nominated and elected to the office of State Treasurer, which position he filled for four years. In 1916 he was again honored by his party, when he was elected to the Delaware Legislature.

Besides enjoying a lucrative practice in the law, Mr. Burris finds sufficient time to devote to all matters pertaining to the growth and prosperity of the town and the surrounding community.

JESSE L. SHEPHERD

The local school board is fortunate indeed, in having as one of its members Mr. Jesse L. Shepherd, whose large business interests in Delaware and other states makes him a valuable asset to the Middletown Board. He is deeply interested in all educational matters, and for several years has served as a member of the Trustees of the Academy and the local school board. Mr. Shepherd has devoted a great portion of his valuable time in the past to matters concerning our school interests, and is heartily in accord with every movement to improve our state school code. He is a member of the Philadelphia Commercial Exchange and conducts one of the largest grain brokerage businesses on the Peninsula, and these in conjunction with his other large business interests makes him an exceptionally busy man.

DANIEL W. STEVENS

Mr. Daniel W. Stevens, the Junior member of the Board like his associate members has many business interests which frequently cause him to burn the midnight oil, but he finds sufficient time to serve as secretary to the Board, and render other valuable services in school matters. Besides serving in the capacity of Middletown's "lone judge," he fills the position as Town Clerk, Secretary to the Light & Water Commission, Secretary of the Building & Loan Association, Director of the Peoples National Bank, and has various other duties. Mr. Stevens is one of our most progressive townsmen, and a staunch supporter of advanced educational school laws. The Board is very fortunate in having him as its secretary and a member.

GOOD ATTENDANCE
BY HARRY ROBERTS

Deep down in the heart of every mother in this wide land of ours lies the hope that her son or daughter will stand first in his or her classes, will be a leader. Is there anything that pleases a mother more than to see her child seated on the platform at the Commencement Exercises and to know that the "only person on the stage" is soon to give the valedictory speech? I think not, and yet, how little the parent thinks of the one thing that has sent the pupil to the top, and that is Good Attendance.

How often have we heard the story of the country school house, usually red, with a big cord wood stove in the back of the room. The girls were the only ones who could attend the whole year. The boys usually had tasks on the farm that kept them at home until the first snowfall. In those days it was highly improbable that the pupil would be there every day. Bad roads, poor transportation and even the whims of the big schoolhouse stove governed attendance. To-day it is not so. With good roads, excellent transportation, improved methods of heating our buildings, there is no reason why good attendance should not be possible. Methods of teaching have developed so rapidly that good attendance is no longer merely hoped for, it is expected, Why shouldn't good attendance be a requirement? It has been proven that the pupil who ranks first in his class is the pupil with the highest attendance marks. This fact should be enough to insure good attendance.

Good attendance ranks above all in importance. Therefore it should be as much of a requirement as the subjects English or Languages. Not however until the pupil receives some mark for this, will good attendance take its proper place in the schools of to-day.

THE VALUE OF GOOD ATTENDANCE
BY CAROLINE FOURACRE

Regular attendance of school is one of the greatest helps a pupil has, for three main reasons.

MADE GOOD RECORD ATTENDANCE

First: When the pupil loses a day occasionally, or several days in succession, he misses the teacher's explanation of his lessons. In mathematics, for instance, he may miss the explanation of an entirely new kind of problem; or in English, he may miss the teacher's explanation of a new classic, the author, circumstances, and reasons for the writing of the book. All this is important when the time comes for monthly tests or mid-term examinations. This does not mean that the pupil should attend school and attain high marks merely to be exempt from final examinations, but the record a pupil makes in school either helps or hinders him in later life.

Second: In losing a class recitation, he loses the view point of the other students. This is very important, for seeing only one side of any subject, one naturally becomes narrow-minded on that subject. Therefore, to be present in class every day, makes him broader-minded.

Third: The forming of habits plays an important part in any young person's life. The habit of promptness and regularity of attendance, is the most valuable habit that one can acquire. It impresses the teacher, so that she is ever ready to recommend highly the pupil who has practiced promptness and regularity of attendance, of the most valuable assets that may be attained in any walk of life.

THE VALUE OF ATTENDANCE
BY JOHN C. POOL

To all who are associated with school work it is quite evident that pupils must attend regularly in order to have a successful school year. They have realized that when a pupil misses a day, he loses one connecting link in the chain of his work. Then when he does return there is work to be made up, which he generally does hurriedly and with little interest, thereby deriving from it, very little benefit. I know of a case where a high school student who missed some days from school, attempted later, to take a College entrance examination, only to fail in the work that had been given in high school during the days he had been absent. Such cases, however, are exceptional.

Pupils who do not attend regularly are not capable of doing the quality of work that is done by the regular attendants, which is only natural. Mr. S. H. Reavis, of the Maryland Department of Education says, "Pupils attending schools fewer days, do an inferior quality of work, ranking below pupils with whom they recite, regardless of the distance they live, the grades they have reached, the kind of teachers they have, or any other influences."

Then when the end of school comes, and pupils are promoted, those who have not attended regularly have lost out again. Many pupils stop school because they are discouraged by having ormer classmates go ahead of them.

The State also loses by non-attendance. It costs the State as much to run the schools on 50 per cent. attendance, as on 100 per cent. In 1920, Delaware spent one and a quarter million dollars for schools, and one-third of that amount was lost through non-attendance. The States are doing all they can to remedy this defect. Our State has given out "Good" and "Perfect" attendance cards to the pupils, and also, a State flag for each room that reaches 90 per cent. in attendance. This shows that the State is trying to remedy it and the parents should feel it their duty to have the schools attended regularly by their children.

Horticultural Meeting

The Executive Committee of the Peninsula Horticultural Society has decided to hold the annual meeting in Berlin, Md., beginning November 29th. The following premiums have been offered, which it is thought will bring out quite a display, as there is some fruit in all parts of the Peninsula:

For the best display of apples, $200, $150, $100. For the best single box, competition open to the world, $50. The best single box of apples, $25, $15, and $10. Best five plates of each of the following varieties, first, $10, second, $5, third, $3: Delicious, Paragon, Stayman, Winesap.

Prizes will also be offered for plates of a large number of varieties.

Decline in Pear Crop

A big reduction is shown in the production of pears by Delaware fruit growers in the last ten years, according to figures of the Census Bureau from the 1920 census.

The total productions of pears in the State in 1920 totaled 97,703 bushels, as compared with 105,357 bushels in 1909. There was also a decrease in the number of bearing trees in the last ten years. On January 1, 1920, there were 249,375 bearing trees in the State, as compared with 449,692 in 1909.

To offset the decrease in the production of pears the department's report shows a considerable increase in production of plums. Growers of the State reported for 1920 the production of 59,561 bushels of plums as against 22,597 in 1909. There were 118,938 bearing trees in the State in 1920 and 171,667 in 1909. There were 35,189 plum trees not of bearing age in Delaware in 1920 as compared with 59,127 in 1909.

Need More Highway Police

Increasing the paid police force for the protection of highway travelers from speed fiends, was one of the important questions that came before the members of the Board of Highway Commissioners at a meeting.

With the completion of the duPont boulevard running the length of the state, and the fact that motorists are being attracted to the highway more, because of its being practically completed, has caused those who are greedy to break speed laws to multiply throughout Delaware.

Reports from several sections indicate that, many serious accidents have been narrowly averted and some have occured, but few with fatal results. The citizens who obey laws have been aroused by the wilful violations of others, and for some time have been demanding better protection for themselves and families.

Two Mules Killed

During the severe electrical storm which passed over this section Friday afternoon, lightning struck and instantly killed two valuable mules owned by Mr. Benjamin Dillinger, who resides on the George F. Wilson farm, two miles west of Middletown. A son who had been working a team in the field, was driving the mules to the stable when the lightning bolt struck the animals. Young Dillinger was knocked to the ground and badly stunned, but soon recovered.

Delaware Legion's Officers

The American Legion convention elected the following officers: State Commander, Captain H. J. Pettyjohn, Milford; Vice Commander, Dr. R. R. Spahr, Middletown; National Committeeman from Delaware, Thomas W. Miller, Wilmington; State Executive Committee, Captain H. H. Hanson, Dover; Harvey Closner, New Castle, and John Lindsay, Milton.

ON THE GRAND RIVER

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

THE Colorado river is one of the great rivers of the United States. A joint resolution of congress proposes a "Greater Colorado." This is to be done by adding 423 miles of stream. This addition is to be accomplished by changing to Colorado the name of the Grand river from its source near Rocky Mountain National park in northern Colorado to its junction with the Green river in southeastern Utah. The Grand and Green rivers together make the Colorado river.

The Grand is 423 miles long from its source to its junction with the Green. Eighty miles of this stream's length is in Utah. The Green rises just south of Yellowstone National park in northwestern Wyoming and is 700 miles long to its junction with the Grand. The Colorado, from Utah to the Gulf of California, is 1,000 miles long.

Though the Green is nearly twice as long as the Grand, the Grand carries the greater volume of water. Moreover, the Green runs 35 miles through the northwestern corner of Colorado and receives much of its volume from Colorado. It is, therefore, contended by Colorado that the Grand is the real upper Colorado and that the Green is a tributary.

It is the people of Colorado who are behind the joint resolution for the change of name. With them it appears to be a matter of deep sentiment. Representative E. T. Taylor of Colorado, speaking to the joint resolution, said:

"Mr. Speaker, for the past 35 years my home has been and is now in the beautiful little city of Glenwood Springs, Colo., on the banks of what has heretofore been called the Grand river, the principal tributary and, in fact, the main stream of the Colorado river, and during all those years I have always hoped and believed that sometime the state pride of the sons and daughters of our beloved commonwealth would bring about the change of the name of that stream to its rightful name, as the source and principal part of that wonderful river, and permit our citizens to fondly and proudly welcome the greatest river in our state as our great state's stream under the name that is dearest to every Coloradan heart. And with the passage of this resolution that hope of many years, not only of my own, but thousands of other Coloradans, will be consummated."

At its last session the Colorado legislature passed a bill officially changing the name of the Grand from Grand to Colorado, within the state boundaries. A bill was introduced in the Utah legislature at the last session to change the name of the Grand from Grand to Colorado within the boundaries of Utah. The Utah legislature did not act on the bill and will not meet again for two years.

In the meantime, inasmuch as the Colorado is an interstate and international stream and is classed as navigable, it has been decided that the change in name should be brought about by act of congress rather than by action of the states. Moreover, the Colorado bulks large in the public eye just now as a national river of tremendous importance. Already water power and irrigation projects of great importance—the Imperial valley in California, for example—mark the course of the river. Projects under discussion are apparently of still greater importance—the proposed Boulder dam across the Colorado just below the Grand canyon, for instance. This project may be undertaken by the federal government. It would be the most spectacular work of its kind in the world and would cost anywhere between forty and seventy-five millions.

The Colorado is a mighty river beyond doubt. Many rivers unite to form it. The principal branches of the Green are the Uinta, Price, Yampa and White; of the Grand, the Eagle, Roaring Fork, Gunnison and Dolores; of the Colorado, the Fremont, Escalante, Paria, Kanab and Virgin on the right and the San Juan, Little Colorado, Bill Williams and Gila on the left. The Grand canyon is on the main river in Arizona and extends from the mouth of the Little Colorado to the Grand Wash. The Grand Canyon National park encloses 217 miles of the river, which in places is 6,000 feet below the rim of the canyon. The lower Colorado runs through a low desert country. At Yuma, on the Mexican line, is an immense irrigation project which consists of a diversion dam nearly a mile long, 400 miles of canals and 70 miles of dikes and cost about $5,000,000. The water is carried to Arizona lands by a thousand-foot tunnel, which passes under the river.

Below Yuma the river, when in flood, inundates large areas lying below sea level. In 1905 the floods enlarged the 50-foot intake of the Imperial valley (California) irrigation canal in Mexican territory to 2,600 feet. It poured all its waters through this break and its regular channel to the Gulf of California went dry. This break was not successfully closed until 1906-07. Floods again threatened to drown out the Imperial valley and in 1909-10 a congressional appropriation of $1,000,000 was applied to the construction of levees and dikes. The waters of the Colorado here run in a huge aqueduct, which the river has built up for itself from silt. This aqueduct cut the part to the north off from the Gulf of California. Evaporation has left only the Salton sea, which is salt and below sea level.

An interesting feature of the discussion of the joint resolution was the bringing out of the history of the Colorado river and the early American Southwest in concise and accurate form. This was set forth in a report furnished by George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey on the history of the naming of the Colorado, Grand and Green rivers and of the state of Colorado. This report explains how the Colorado came to bear no less than nine names between 1540 and 1776. It also sets forth how the Green river came to be known as the "Ghost river" to geographers. Among the facts brought out are these:

It was the Coronado expedition of 1540-42, sent out by Viceroy Mendoza, that first explored the pueblo country of New Mexico and Arizona and the Great Plains as far northeast as central Kansas and discovered the Colorado river and the Grand canyon. Alarcon discovered the Colorado at its mouth and gave it the name of Rio de Buena Guia (good guide) because that was Mendoza's "device." Diaz, traveling along the river, saw the Indians carrying burning brands with which to warm themselves; so he named it Rio del Tizon (firebrand). Cardenas discovered the Colorado at the Grand canyon, but for some reason refrained from naming it, probably because soon afterward it was identified with the Rio del Tizon. So the Coronado expedition gave the Colorado its two first names.

The Coronado expedition was disappointing and it was not until 1581 that an expedition under Rodriguez revisited the region. This revived interest in the conquering and settling of New Mexico.

The contract for the conquest and settlement was finally awarded in 1595 to Juan de Onate, who was made governor, adelantado and captain general of the province of New Mexico. In 1598, Onate reached the Santa Fe region with an army and a colony of 400 men, of whom 130 had their families. Onate ruled New Mexico until 1605. By 1605 he and his subordinates had reexplored practically all the ground covered by Coronado and opened new trails. In 1604 he made a journey from San Gabriel, his headquarters near Santa Fe, to the head of the Gulf of California. He went by way of Zuni, Moqui and Williams river to the Colorado and down the east bank of that river to the gulf. Crossing the Colorado Chiquito, or little Colorado "10 leagues" southwest of Moqui, he named it "Rio Colorado * * * because the water is nearly red." Be it noted that the name "Colorado" is here given for the first time, not to the Colorado river but to one of its branches, the Little Colorado. To the Colorado itself, Onate gave the name "Rio Grande de Buena Esperanza" (good hope).

At some indefinite time during the next hundred years the name Colorado was transferred from the Little Colorado to the main river, and before the end of the century had been pretty well established. Father Kino, the great Piman apostle, 1683-1711, uses the name freely, as he does the alternative name Rio del Norte; and he even bestows upon it a new name, Rio de los Apostoles.

A revolt of the Pueblo Indians in 1680 resulted in the entire evacuation of New Mexico by the Spaniards until its reconquest by Vergas in 1692-94, when most of the missions were reestablished also. San Diego, the first of the California missions, was established in 1769; and in the next 30 years 17 others had been established, dotting the coast from San Diego to San Francisco bay.

Father Silvestre Velez de Escalante, then stationed at the Zuni mission, spent eight days at Moqui in June, 1775, trying to discover whether there was an Indian trail across the Grand canyon. He failed to extract any information from the Indians and concluded that the canyon was impassable. In a letter on the subject written to Father Garces August 18, 1775, he called the river or the canyon Rio Grande de los Cosninos. The Cosnina (Havasupai) Indians were settled on Cataract creek. The next year, 1776, Garces himself traveled from Mohave to Moqui, and went into the Grand canyon at the bend below the Little Colorado on June 26. He named the canyon Puerto de Bucareli (Bucareli's pass) in honor of the then viceroy.

Grand river, both above and below its junction with Gunnison river, was named Rio San Rafael by Fathers Dominiguez and Escalante in 1776. To the south branch, the present Gunnison river, they gave the name Rio San Javier (Xavier) and reported the Ute Indian name as Tomichi. In this area Pike's maps, 1805-07, like other early maps, are difficult to interpret. His "Rio de los Animas" (las Animas) is much more like Grand river than his "Rio San Rafael." In 1843 Fremont lettered it Grand river, as did Captain Stansbury in 1849.

But for long years the maps showed great diversity of nomenclature. Below its junction with the Gunnison, this river was usually called Grand river, rarely Rio Colorado or Grand and even Colorado. Above the junction it was called Grand, Bunkara, Blue and North Fork of Grand river. Gunnison river was named variously Eagle, Eagle Tail, South Fork of Grand, Grande and Grand river.

In after years Captain Gunnison's name became gradually fixed on the branch which he explored, and the name Grand on the north or main branch, while the name Blue river now describes a small south branch of the latter in Summit county, Colorado.

Green river was called Rio de San Buenaventura by Dominiguez and Escalante in 1776, and Escalante says (Diario, Sept. 17, 1776), that it was so named in 1763 by Fr. Alonso de Posada. Thinking that it flowed to the west, the map makers represented it as crossing the Great basin and flowing into the Pacific ocean. Thus it was that the River Buenaventura became the famous "ghost river," which for years haunted the maps of the far West. Pike, 1805-07, mapped it with headwaters in the position of upper Green river, having an affluent, Rio de San Clemente (Escalante's name for White river, an east branch of the Green river), and flowing southwest into Sevier lake (nameless). Before 1811, however, upper Green river was known to be connected with the Colorado. The Astorians called it both Spanish river and Colorado river. It was called Rio Colorado by Jedediah S. Smith in 1824 and Rio Colorado of the West by William H. Ashley in 1825. Bonneville, 1837, lettered it Colorado of the West on his map of the territory west of the Rocky Mountains.

The name Green river dates at least as far back as 1824. Dale refers to a news item in the Missouri Intelligencer, June 25, 1825, of a party leaving Santa Cruz in November, 1824, to trap on "Green river." Fremont says that the Spaniards, contrasting "its timbered shores and green wooded islands with its dry sandy plains," named it Rio Verde (Green river); Bancroft speaks of an employee of Ashley's, "Mr. Green who gave his name to Green river"; and Chittenden advances the theory that the name may have been suggested by the color of the water.

The act of congress providing for the organization of the territory of Colorado was approved February 28, 1861. As introduced and as passed by the house, the bill named the proposed new organization the territory of Idaho—"Idaho" having been selected from many names proposed. In the senate, on motion of Senator Wilson of Massachusetts, the name of the territory was amended by striking out "Idaho" and inserting "Colorado." This was done at the suggestion of Delegate Williams, for the reason that the Colorado river arose in its mountains, hence there was a peculiar fitness in the name. Bancroft, however, says that "The name Colorado was given to it at the suggestion of the man (William Gilpin) selected for its first governor"; and he quotes from a manuscript of Gilpin's as follows: "Some wanted it called Jefferson, some Arcadia. I said the people have to a great extent named the states after the great rivers of the country, and the great feature of that country is the great Colorado river. 'Ah,' said he (Wilson of Massachusetts), 'that is it'; and he named it Colorado."

Would Have Literary Critic Modest

I shall not pretend that when I call the poetry of Milton good I suppose my judgment to have more validity than what may be claimed for that of the urchin who says the same of peppermints, wrote Olive Bell recently in the New Republic; but I do think a critic should cultivate a sense of humor. If he be very sure that his enthusiasm is the only appropriate response of a perfectly disinterested sensibility to absolute beauty, let him be as dogmatic as is compatible with good breeding; failing that, counsel as great a measure of modesty as may be compatible with the literary character. Let him remember that, as a rule, he is not demanding homage for what he knows to be absolutely good, but pointing to what he likes and trying to explain why he likes it. That, to my mind, is the chief function of the critic.

An unerring eye for masterpieces is of more use to a dealer than to him. Mistakes do not matter; if we are to call mistakes what are perhaps no more than the records of a perverse or obscure mood. Was it a mistake in 1890 to rave about Wagner? Is it a mistake to find him intolerable now? Frankly, I suspect the man or woman of the nineties who was unmoved by Wagner of having wanted sensibility, and him or her who today revels in that music of being aesthetically oversexed. Be that as it may, never to pretend to like what bores or dislike what pleases him, to be honest in his reactions and exact in their description, is all I ask of a critic. It is asking a good deal it seems to me. To a lady who protested that she knew what she liked, Whistler is said to have replied: "So, madame, do the beasts of the field."

Women climbers are particularly numerous this year in Switzerland.

MR. DOG'S HEN HOUSES.

MR. DOG had been bothered with Mr. Fox until he was about worn out, for, no matter how well he kept watch, Mr. Fox managed to get a chicken or a hen once in a while.

Very often Mr. Dog would see Mr. Fox and scare him off, but though he had tried and tried he could not catch him.

One day when the farmer was putting some beehives in the yard back of the barn Mr. Dog thought of something which made him smile, but he was not going to laugh until he was sure the plan would work, for he knew full well that he had a very clever and suspicious fellow to deal with.

That night when the moon was shining Mr. Dog went down the road with his friend, Mr. Hound Dog, first making Mr. Hound promise he would not chase Mr. Fox, because he would spoil everything.

It was very hard for Mr. Hound to understand what could be more sport than chasing Mr. Fox, but on being promised a very large bone he said he would do just as Mr. Dog told him.

They hid behind some bushes, and pretty soon along came Mr. Fox, but hearing Mr. Dog and Mr. Hound talking, he listened, making sure he could run away if they moved.

"Yes," Mr. Dog was telling his friend, "the master had decided that Mr. Fox is too smart for us, and so he has bought some new hen houses and put them in the yard back of the barn.

"There are two hens in each house, little white houses on benches and I guess now we have Mr. Fox fooled."

Mr. Fox smiled as he listened and then, turning very softly, he trotted on down the road and jumped over the stone wall, taking a short cut to the farm.

Mr. Dog had been peeking through the bushes at Mr. Fox and saw just what was happening, so when Mr. Fox was out of sight he and Mr. Hound ran for home and arrived just as Mr. Fox had tumbled over one of the hives.

Out came the angry bees and Mr. Fox fled, howling as he ran, while Mr. Dog called after him: "Come back, Mr. Fox, and try the other little hen houses; we had them built especially for you to play with."

Mr. Hound wanted to chase Mr. Fox, but Mr. Dog told him he might get stung by the bees, and so Mr. Hound had to be contented with howling and barking.

Mr. Fox did not bother Mr. Dog again; he kept as far away from that farm as possible and never was seen around there afterward.

Seemed Only Explanation.

Wilbur had seen the various peddlers come through the alley with horses and wagons pulling their wares. When the man came near enough Wilbur asked sympathetically: "Mister, is your horse dead?"

WHEN YOU TELEPHONE.

IN THE business world it is no longer considered good form when you telephone to use the word "Hello"—designated by one of the telephone directors as "an ungraceful and rude little word." Much less then ought it to be used in social telephoning and the telephoning that takes place after business hours and in the home.

"Remember—telephone courtesy begins when the bell rings," says a little booklet recently got out by one of the telephone companies. Now this is something that the young man or woman in business has to remember. He knows, for instance, if he is dealing with possible buyers that he is far more apt to get an order if he does remember it. If he responds to the telephone with a surly, "What do you want?" before he knows who is calling and then, when he realizes that it is a customer, changes the tone of his voice and his mode of speech, he has made a bad beginning, and he is less apt to make a sale than if he opens the conversation with courtesy and cordiality.

Now here are some things that you should remember whether you are using the telephone for business or purely social or personal purposes.

If you open the telephone conversation do not ask any one to give his or her name until you announce your own.

If you are calling a certain person in a household and another member of the family whose voice you recognize answers do not ignore that person, saying, "Hello, I want to speak to Mary," but rather something like this: "Good morning, Jane; this is Claire speaking. May I talk to Mary?"

If another person opens the telephone conversation do not make the mistake of prolonging the conversation after she has finished her errand. Especially if an out-of-town wire is being used, be careful not to cause the other person to have to pay double tolls because of your verbosity.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

By C. N. LURIE

Common Errors in English and How to Avoid Them

"BETWEEN" AND "AMONG."

GENERALLY speaking, "between" must be employed when reference is made to two subjects, "among" when there is reference to more than two. Thus, "The money was divided between the two men" but, "The money was distributed among the four." However, it is correct sometimes to use "between" even in reference to many objects; when the relation expressed exists between one of the objects and its neighbor. Thus, "There are eighty trees in my orchard, and there is a space of ten feet between them," meaning that the space lies between one tree and the next one. In this case it would not be correct to use "among."

"Between" should never be used in referring to a single object, as in the following incorrect phrase from Dickens: "And with a gap of a whole night between every one." The number of objects that are governed by the preposition "between" is never less than two.

Wellington's Census Return.

Although old census papers are supposed to be destroyed after the necessary data have been obtained and the reports finished, a fortunate English collector still possesses a paper filled out by the duke of Wellington for the census of 1851. To the question, Any deaf or dumb in household? he replied, I am deaf, and to the question, Where born? he replied, Born in Ireland—believe in Athy. The Iron Duke was wrong as to his birthplace, however, for records show that he was actually born in Upper Merrion street, Dublin.—The Living Age.

Preferred to Pay the Fine.

"But how much would the fine be if I kept the library book until Monday?" he asked her.

WAX MUST FIRST BE HEATED

Impossible to Get Light From Wax Candle Without the Presence of Necessary Gases.

A wax candle really is a gas-torch. You will find that when you apply a lighted match to the wick of a candle it will not light readily. You have to hold the match to the wick until the wick burns sufficiently to heat the wax hot enough to turn it into gases which, on mixing with the oxygen in the air, produce the fire in the form of light.

The candle will continue to be lighted and to burn as long as the wax continues hot enough to give off the gases or until the candle is entirely consumed. Any interruption to this process of transforming the wax into gas will result in the extinguishing of the light.

The reason the candle goes out when you blow on the flame is that the gases which feed the flame at the end of the wick are blown away, the process of turning the hot wax into gas is interrupted and with the gas supply shut off the flame is extinguished.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

To have sound, healthy nerves, completely under control, digestive organs that are capable of absorbing a hearty meal, means you have a strong constitution! Your general attitude is one of optimism and energy.

"There's a Reason"

PREPARE GARDEN LATE IN SUMMER

One of Most Important Things Is to Burn or Haul Away All Trash of Any Sort.

FIRST PUT BEAN POLES AWAY

Plow or Spade Ground and Cover With Coarse Manure to Put It in Better Physical Condition for Spring Planting.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The man who makes a genuinely good garden does not begin in the spring. He begins in the fall. But the spring is a long way off, you say? The bean poles are beginning to rot already, and it is time right now to take out insurance by putting them away properly. And that is only one of a considerable number of simple things of equal importance that should be done in the garden—now.

Because you have harvested all the garden crops do not fall into the serious error of thinking that you do not need to give any further attention to the garden till next spring.

Clean-Up Time in Garden.

One of the most important things is to clean up. You wouldn't excuse a slovenly kept house. Well, slovenliness in the garden is hardly more to be tolerated. Good housekeeping in the garden is a matter of importance, not merely because a slovenly garden in winter is the most desolate-looking thing in man's perversion of nature, but because the success of next year's vegetables depends on it, largely.

Most of the diseases and insect pests that affect garden crops live over winter in the remains of the past season's crops. Such materials as cabbage stalks, bean vines, tomato vines—in fact, trash of any sort in the garden—should be collected and hauled to a dump, or burned.

Then, having the ground clean, there is another thing of equal importance. It should not be allowed to lie bare over winter. Ground exposed to beating rains will puddle and wash and great loss of plant food is sure to result. A very good plan is to sow the garden in some green crop, such as rye or winter barley. That protects the ground and adds organic matter to the soil. But there is, according to garden specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture, a still better plan and one that can be put in practice after the season for sowing rye or barley is long past. That better plan is to plow or spade the garden in the fall or as early in the winter as possible and give it a heavy coating of horse manure. Leave the ground in the rough, as this will prevent the loss of the valuable ingredients in the manure.

Gives Early Vegetables.

Now, what have you gained by that plan? Well, in addition to fertilizing the ground and putting it in better physical condition, this: The garden can be planted earlier in the spring than if it had been left bare or planted to a great deal. It amounts, frequently, to having a number of nice vegetables on your table two or three weeks ahead of your neighbor who did not break his garden till spring. Such crops as smooth peas, beets, lettuce and onion sets can be planted as early in the spring as the ground can be worked. If plowing or spading the ground has been deferred till spring, a delay of as much as three weeks is likely to occur after these crops should have been planted—which means, reducing it to money measure, that you will go on buying vegetables for at least that long after you might have been bringing them in nice and fresh from your own garden if you had done a little work in the fall or early winter.

Get Rid of Faulty Fowls.

Get rid of the egg-eaters and the feather-pullers, if you have some in your flock, or they will soon teach the habit to others.

Drawback in Crowding.

One of the greatest drawbacks to successful poultry keeping is the attempt of many folks to crowd 50 fowls where there is only room for 25.

Best and Safest Plan.

The best and safest way for modern dairy conditions is to keep the bull under control and confined to himself or with other bulls.

Silage-Fed Steers Best.

Pennsylvania feed tests, just concluded, show silage-fed steers paying 20 per cent better returns than steers exclusively corn-fed.

Hens Must Have Variety.

Hens, to thrive and lay well, must have a variety of food, and they must have it clean and in a sanitary condition.

STRONG APPEAL MADE FOR HEALTHY CATTLE

Poster Used in Tuberculosis Eradication Campaign.

Careful Experiments Have Demonstrated That Disease Cannot Be Detected to Any Great Extent by Physical Examinations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Unlike most other infectious diseases, tuberculosis has an insidious way of working under cover, and oftentimes animals of the most healthy appearance are found to react to the tuberculin test, say veterinarians of the United States Department of Agriculture. No cattle owner can afford to live in doubt as to whether his animals are affected, they add. This point is brought out clearly in a two-colored poster published by the department, on which is shown two herds of dairy cattle. From all appearances the animals of both herds are healthy, but as a matter of fact those of one herd are afflicted with tuberculosis.

The poster also shows two children—one healthy, one diseased—and the point is brought out that tuberculous animals may transmit the disease to children who drink the milk produced. The poster is a strong appeal for healthy cattle, and it is to be used extensively in the tuberculosis eradication campaign being carried on by the department.

Careful experiments in practical work have shown that tuberculosis cannot be detected to any great extent among animals by physical examinations. The most reliable method is the tuberculin test applied by a trained operator. Tuberculin, while regarded as the most accurate diagnostic agency known to science, is safe only in the hands of a trained and skillful operator who is acquainted with its limitations and with the symptoms it produces in the animals to which it is applied, the department veterinarians say.

MANURE SHOWS GREAT VALUE

Where Applied to Clover Fields It Increased Yield Threefold—Phosphorus Helps.

Due to the cool weather of the spring and the freeze which occurred early in the season, the Iowa agricultural experiment station has had an opportunity to show the value of common barnyard manure on clover. It has been found that where manure was added to the fields only once in the rotation the stand has been increased three times over the plots where no manure was used.

Eight tons per acre were added to the manured plots and here the leaf surface and root development are heavier and better. Where phosphorus was added at the same time as manure, plants are even more vigorous and have a greater height.

CARE FOR LATE VEGETABLES

To Store Late Products Nothing More Is Required Than Use of Existing Facilities.

The storing of late vegetables is often profitable for those who grow them in sufficient quantities for marketing, giving the grower the direct benefit of the winter price. To care for the surplus vegetables in many cases requires nothing more than the use of existing facilities in the form of a storage room in the basement of a dwelling or under an outbuilding or to build an outdoor cellar of wood or masonry. If permanent facilities are not available, late root crops can be kept in outdoor pits or banks, requiring no cash outlay except for labor.

SHEEP GOOD AS SCAVENGERS

Feed and Care Are Essential to Develop Flock for Mutton—Animals Keep Down Weeds.

Sheep possess great ability to renovate the soil, keep down all kinds of feed that would otherwise often be weeds and to consume odds and ends totally wasted, but the man who undertakes to develop a really profitable flock of mutton sheep must get away, as far as possible, from the idea that they are kept because of their ability as scavengers. He must like his sheep and plan to give them the most painstaking care and the best food that his farm affords. Unless he does this he is likely to have trouble.

PUTTING PLOW AWAY IN FALL

Excellent Plan to Apply Good Coat of Axle Grease and Cover With Thin, Dry Dust.

When you put your plow away for the season, put a good coat of axle grease on the point and moldboard and cover the grease with a good covering of dry dust. This will cause the axle grease to stay where the grease alone would dry out, and will save a lot of scouring when plow time comes.

WIFE TAKES HUSBANDS ADVICE

And Is Made Well Again by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Springfield, Mass.—"The doctor told my husband that I had to have an operation, otherwise I would be a sickly woman and could not have any more children on account of my weakened condition. I refused to have the operation. My husband asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it would not help me. For the first four months I could do but little work, had to lie down most of the time, was nervous and could eat hardly anything, but my husband was always reminding me to take the Vegetable Compound, which I did. Of my eight children this last one was the easiest birth of all and I am thankful for your Vegetable Compound. I recommend it to my friends when I hear them complaining about their ills."—Mrs. M. NATALE, 72 Fremont St., Springfield, Mass.

Sickly, ailing women make unhappy homes, and after reading Mrs. Natale's letter one can imagine how this home was transformed by her restoration to health. Every woman who suffers from such ailments should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. It is surely worth while.

One of the French girls who speaks several languages went to the phone and after several minutes finally spoke in Spanish. My friend asked her why she was talking in Spanish. She replied in English that the French central said there was a Chinaman on the line who could only speak Spanish besides his native tongue."—Atchison Globe.

FINE SCHCOL RECORDS

ONCE more The Transcript has the pleasant duty to extend its congratulations to its young friends in our town and country,—this time to a host of them—for their very excellent performance of an important civic duty, school attendance, wherein a large number disclose the fine record of a whole year in school without missing a single day or being once late—a perfect record! Besides these, a yet greater number made almost perfect school records.

On our front page we present photographed groups of these students, together with those of the School Board, their Principal, his assistants and the teachers, whose skilled and faithful labors conduced to this creditable result.

The Transcript, together with all our citizens, shares the pride their teachers and parents feel in this very creditable showing in school work.

This is as it should be, for in thus improving to the full those golden moments of knowledge-getting, our boys and girls show great wisdom, for they follow a course which cannot fail to redound to their lasting advantage in future years.

BLUE HEN CHICKS' HONORS

THE Transcript warmly felicitates those youthful citizens of our "Delaware state" who so handsomely bore off the honors from ten competing states in the Eastern States Exposition at Camp Vail.

Our Diamond State lads and lasses, both in their team and in their individual work, won ten first prize ribbons—a greater number than any other state. Capital! Blue Hen blood will tell!

Then, too, the Dairy Club judging team, composed of Gordon Armstrong, of McDonough, Irvin Armstrong, of Middletown, and Ernest Milliken, of Cooch's Bridge, won first place, and our home boy, Irvin Armstrong, stood second as the best individual judge. Capital again!

Young ladies and young gentlemen, both in the state at large and here in our own vicinage, by your superb achievements, you have highly honored yourselves, your friends and your state, and they all are right proud of you.

OTHERS SHOULD DO LIKEWISE

THE National Biscuit Company has recently made a cut of ten per cent. in prices, making a total cut of forty per cent. since last September.

There is nothing strange in this. It is simply conforming its prices to the times.

But what is strange is that other manufacturers of food and other commodities do not do likewise. Only recently it was announced that the iron trade was attempting to boost its prices, and all men know that iron commodities are out of reach, even though the war was ended in 1918.

The high price of iron products is almost killing the building business. The profiteering in other lines is keeping business at a standstill. And so it goes. The greed of men in position to control the market prices is paralyzing the business of the country, and in the long run they will suffer with the others.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S selections of members of the American delegation to the armaments conference have been hailed with the wildest approval. No stronger quartette could have been chosen to look after American interests.

Middletown's Attendance Record

Middletown scores high record of attendance for month of September. Below we give the number enrolled in each grade, and the per cent. each made for the month just closed. 6th and 12th grades groups have perfect attendance.

RED CROSS GIVES ANNUAL BUDGET

$19,361,657 Allotted for Current Program of Relief and Service.

MILLIONS FOR VETERAN AID

Medical Aid for European Children Will Cost $6,000,000 This Year.

Washington.—Expenditures totalling $19,361,637 for carrying through its program of relief and services in the United States and overseas are outlined in the budget of the American Red Cross for the current fiscal year. This total is more than $5,000,000 lower than the expenditure during the last fiscal year, when the disbursements reached $24,492,741, it is announced at National Headquarters in a statement calling attention to the necessity of continued support of the organization by response to the Annual Roll Call, November 11 to 24, if the vital work of the society is to be effectively carried on.

Outstanding among the items of the domestic budget is the appropriation of $3,669,256 for work in behalf of the disabled ex-service man and his family. This appropriation represents the amount alloted to this work from National Headquarters only and does not take into consideration the millions being spent in chapters for relief of the World War veteran. It is in the chapter that the greater amount is spent in meeting this obligation of the Red Cross, the announcement continues, as manifested by figures of the fiscal year 1920-1921 when the total was approximately $9,000,000, of which $2,692,094 represented the disbursement of National Headquarters while the remainder was the chapters' contribution to this field of Red Cross service.

Vast Work for Disabled

Chief among the sub-divisions of the appropriation for work with veterans is that which concerns itself with assistance to disabled men and women in government hospitals. This item of $1,790,000, an increase of more than $500,000 over the appropriation for the same work in last year's budget, will provide those personal services for the disabled and their families which are indispensable to supplement those provided by the government. The director of the Veterans' Bureau has recently expressed his desire that the Red Cross should continue and extend these "humanizing services." Other items of the appropriation for veterans' relief are proportionately increased. An additional appropriation of $469,600 has been made for Red Cross work in connection with regular Army and Navy hospitals and with the regular Army and Navy.

For disaster relief, the Red Cross has set aside for the current twelve months an appropriation of $543,976, virtually doubling the appropriation for the same purpose for the fiscal year 1920-1921.

More than $2,000,000 is provided for service and assistance to the 3,600 Red Cross chapters by the national organization.

Helping Destitute Children

Other items of the domestic budget include $498,546 for miscellaneous activities, including contributions restricted for special purposes and $768,600 for management. Each of these items represents large reductions over similar appropriations of the previous year.

From a fund of $10,000,000, $5,000,000 of which was contributed through the European Relief Council campaign and $5,000,000 allotted by the Red Cross for child welfare work in Europe, there remains $8,765,108 still available, of which it is estimated that $6,000,000 will be required for this work during the current year. For Red Cross participation in the joint effort to relieve famine conditions in Russia, for final work in the China famine, for Junior Red Cross and other overseas activities including the closing of the old general relief program in Europe $4,978,000 is made available.

In announcing the national budget, the Red Cross makes it clear that the figures do not include chapter expenditures or place any cash estimate on the invaluable service of volunteers in chapters.

How Better Than Pills?

The question has been asked. In what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is, they are easier and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine. Then, they not only move the bowels but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

ARMY OF 50,000 LOST IN MONTH

General Lu's Forces Wiped Out by Mutiny, Surrender and Battle Losses.

CANTONESE WIN THE "WAR"

Righteousness of Their Cause Given as Cause for Victory in Battle Between Two Chinese Provinces —Gambling Licensed.

Canton.—The "war" between Kwangtung and Kwangsi has seemingly terminated with the fall of Nanking on July 22—just a month after the beginning of hostilities—when Lu Yungting, the foremost of southern militarists, made his official exit from the province which he had dominated for ten years.

General Lu was at one time inspector general of the two Kwang provinces, and a constitutionalist leader when constitutionalism was popular in the southwest.

50,000 Army Wiped Out.

Prior to the opening of recent hostilities General Lu had an army of nearly 50,000. He lost it all within a month by mutiny, desertion, surrender and loss in battle.

The Cantonese have won. They attribute their victory to the righteousness of their cause, to disaffection among the Kwangsi forces toward their leader and to better organization and discipline in the Canton army, to assurances given the people of Kwangsi of noninterference with their ambition for self-government, and to Dr. Sun Yat-sen's political doctrine of representative government.

The military governors of Kwantung province have looked upon that province as conquered territory since the one-time monarchist governor, Lung Chi-Kuang, was ejected, notwithstanding the Cantonese played no small part in ousting Lung.

Gambling Is Licensed.

Under the administration of the Lu Yung-ting faction licensed gambling was revived under the pretext of raising revenue for military purposes, burdensome taxes were imposed to the detriment of trade and industry, and millions of dollars of worthless paper money issued without security.

The Kwangsi people themselves have played an important part in helping the Cantonese to drive the militarists out of the province. Besides organizing revolutionary forces to supplement the Canton armies, they have carried on valuable propaganda to convince their fellow clansmen of the good intentions of the Cantonese.

Cantonese leaders now declare that they have no ambition to dominate Kwangsi. Gen. Chen Chung-ming has repeatedly refused to allow military authorities occupying Kwangsi towns and cities to establish political organs or offices which will be misinterpreted or misunderstood by those who are antagonistic to the constitutionalist government.

LOAFERS PROFIT IN ENGLAND

Surveys Show "Practicall" Socialism Pays Jobless More Than Workers Get.

London.—Surveys here show that "practical" socialism is benefiting the unemployed to such an extent that it is actually more profitable to be without work than to have a job.

Islington, Cumberwell and Bedmondsey boroughs of London have in effect a law providing $18 a week "allowance" to the unemployed man having a so-called "standard" family of a wife and six children. The average wage received by the Londoner who works is $15. Thus it would benefit the worker by just $3 to quit his job and join the ranks of the unemployed.

Shoreditch and Hackney boroughs have fixed "allowances" at $22.50 a week. The board of guardians of Woolwich borough is considering an "allowance" of $25 a week. Socialist leaders who have gained control of the boards of guardians and who are responsible for agitation resulting in the passage of these "relief" measures predict that similar ordinances will be soon put into effect by every borough of workingmen in the city.

Sweden's Population.

Stockholm.—Sweden's total population at the end of 1920 amounted to more than 5,904,000 according to the Central Statistical bureau's preliminary figures just published. This is an increase during 1920 of more than 57,000 and a record increase since 1861.

$175,000 for Finder of Petroleum in Australia

Washington.—The Australian government has offered a reward of $125,000 and the government of New South Wales has offered $50,000 to any one who discovers petroleum in paying quantities. Hundreds of thousands of pounds sterling have been expended by the government and by private concerns in an endeavor to find oil in Australia, but so far the discoveries have been practically negligible.

Aged Woman Chokes Weasel.

Mount Carmel, Pa.—Although seventy-seven years old and recovering from a fractured rib sustained three weeks ago, when a door blowing shut knocked her down the cellar steps, Mrs. Mary Ramsey of Fisherdale went to the rescue of a chick she heard crying in distress and found a large weasel carrying it away. She caught the weasel with her bare hands and choked it to death.

She laid down her embroidery as a head appeared above the slide at the postoffice window. Crossing the intervening space between her chair and the window, she encountered a pair of smiling eyes, into which, to her knowledge, she had never gazed before.

"Any mail for me today?" he inquired, and now his lips smiled, too.

"Did you really expect any?" she seriously answered, thinking he might be like the rest, who came across from the store to "jolly" her.

"I surely would like some," he replied. "Say, a fellow gets sort of homesick after he has been away from home for weeks. Do you live in this town?"

"Yes," she answered. "I got kind of lonesome staying at home, so I thought I'd try this (indicating the office)."

"Then you're not married?" and he laughed as if that were a question he wanted to have settled. "And I'm not, either," he added. "Do you know, this is the first time I could ever get up my courage to speak to you."

The color came into Ruth's cheek, and she turned away.

"Don't go, please," he said. "Do you ever have any dances down here?"

"Why yes," she said slowly

"Couldn't you let me know when there is going to be one, and I'll come down."

"Oh," she exclaimed, "How could I, when I don't even know your name, or anything about you?"

"Why—" he begain, and then hesitated. "Call up the salesman for the Abbot Packing company at Hotel Clifford. I'll surely be there." Glancing out of the window, he saw the car coming, and with a hasty "Good-bye," boarded it for the adjoining city, where his headquarters were.

Ruth sat limply down in her chair. Surely here was an adventure—the first real one she had met with since working in the office.

She glanced across the store (the post-office was in the corner of the largest grocery store in town), and spied John, the son of the owner, deep in a newspaper. "Oh, John," she called, "who was that salesman who was just in here?"

"What's that?" he asked, sleepily. "Salesman? Oh, I don't know. He has been coming here several weeks—I think. Why?"

She went over and stood in front of the counter. "Now, John, I never asked any favor of you before, but I wish you would do me just one, and never tell."

"I might, if it wasn't too much work," he guardedly replied.

"No work at all," she responded, hastily. "When you go to the city next time, go to Hotel Clifford, and find out all about him. Remember—all about him—because I want to know."

John grinned broadly, but wouldn't promise, so she went back to work.

A week passed, and she knew John had been to the city, but she would not say any more to him.

John, on his first visit to the city, after Ruth's talk with him, had strolled into the office of the Hotel Clifford, where he was well acquainted. His visit was not very long, and when he emerged onto the sidewalk, his expression was one of intense surprise. He decided that unless Ruth questioned him, he would keep his own counsel, considering that by far the best course to pursue.

The days went by, and the weeks also, but he came no more. One day John drifted into the postoffice, and leaned against the stamp window. "Ruth," he said casually, "that salesman was all right."

"Was he?" she asked quietly.

"Sure, I found out all about him."

Ruth made no reply, but went on stamping letters. "You don't seem so interested as you did."

She shrugged her shoulders, and kept her back to him.

"Oh well, if you don't want to know, you don't have to." And John returned to his work.

After he was gone, Ruth sat down at her desk, and took out the letter which had come two days before. It was mailed from Chicago. It read:

"Dear Miss K.:

"Owing to a hasty change of plans the firm called me home, and the man whose place I was taking, went back to his old job. I wanted so much to see you, but didn't have the nerve, or the time, before returning. You did not answer my card, and I do so want you to answer this, that I shall have to disclose my identity. But surely you were just a little interested in me, when I was just an unknown salesman—I could stake my life on that.

"I am the son of Abbot, of the firm of Abbot Packing Co., and was just giving the regular salesman a much-needed vacation. On my numerous trips to your town, I have discovered a very good inn, and the thing I most want to do, at present, is to take an extended visit at that same inn. This would make an ideal setting for mutual acquaintance. Shall I come?

"Yours, from the first time I saw you."

Glancing at the clock, she saw it was closing time, and hastily putting on her coat and hat, she went down the street to the telegraph office. The operator stared at her, as she took down the address and the message, which said simply, "Come. O. K."

WISDOM'S WHISPERS

Genius and virtue, like diamonds are best plain set.

To be a good patriot a man must consider his countrymen as God's creatures and himself as accountable for his acting toward them.

Out of suffering comes the serious mind; out of salvation the grateful heart; out of endurance fortitude; out of deliverance faith.

"IS YOUR BARN SAPPING YOUR PROFITS?"

Modern manufacturess pay large salaries to efficiency experts, whose duty is to keep their eyes open for needless expenses and to stop the leakage of profits.

On the farm you must be your own efficiency expert.

A leaky roof may ruin your hay loft. A broken down stall can injure your horses. A rotten, worm-eaten floor may breed disease or break an animal's leg. A cold wind-swept barn is a bad place to house cattle.

When figuring up your profit and loss for the year you will find these little things are sapping your profits.

Look over your farm buildings, fences and sheds, and see if you aren't letting profits leak through which a little lumber and labor would stop. Then tell us what you want to do to stop this leakage, and we may be able to offer some suggestions. We will tell you what the materials for the repairs will cost.

Some rainy day when it is too wet to work in the field and the help is idle, you can set to work repairing your barn and other buildings.

British Peers Selling Estates

Claim Action Is Forced Upon Them by Taxation and Death Duties.

MUST SEEK SMALLER HOMES

One Big Landed Proprietor After Another Is Dividing and Selling His Holdings—In Same Families for Many Centuries.

London.—England's great estates are crumbling under the weight of taxation and death duties and one big landed proprietor after another among the nobility is dividing and selling his holdings, many of which have been in the hands of single families for centuries.

The latest indication that peers are finding it necessary to seek smaller homes comes in the announcement of the duke of Portland that he may have to abandon his palatial mansion, Welbeck Abbey, in Nottinghamshire. This is only one of the residences of the duke, who owns some 200,000 acres in England.

Duke Expresses Fears.

"For centuries past landed estates have been handed down from generation to generation," said the duke, addressing his tenants on the occasion of the coming of age of his son Lord Francis Cavendish. "Landlords and tenants have lived on terms of mutual trust and affection. I fear, however, that the state of things is passing away, for with the present weight of taxation and the extremely onerous death duties, the future may become very uncertain for all landed proprietors. If this is good for the country, I certainly do not complain.

"With regard to my own case, it may not be possible for me and my family to continue to reside at Welbeck, but I fear that there can be little doubt that those who come after me will not be able to do so."

Many Connections Severed.

On all sides historic houses are finding new tenants and ancient families are severing their connection with the soil. The duke of Devonshire sold Devonshire house in 1919 and Stowe house, the property of Baroness Kinloss, was disposed of recently.

Others who have sold their properties recently include the duke of Bedford, the duke of Westminster, the duke of Rutland, the duke of Grafton, the duke of Marlborough. Lord Leconfield, Lord Beauchamp, Earl Bradford, Lord Aberdeen, Lord Lovat, Lord Harrington, Lord Harlech, the countess of Warwick and Sir Richard Bulkeley.

Runnymede, a meadow on the bank of the Thames river, in Surrey, site of the historic battle where the barons wrested from King John the Magna Charta in 1215, was up for sale but aroused sentiment compelled its withdrawal. Attacking the government in the debate on the corn production acts repeal bill, Lord Lincolnshire in the house of lords declared the present ministry was preparing to sell the crown lands and said nothing remained but "to pawn the crown jewels."

Three-Year-Old Girl Walks Up Pike's Peak

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Miss Helen M. Riordan, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Riordan of New York city, holds the world's record for the ascent on foot of Pike's Peak.

She and her mother walked up to the burro stand, where they stayed all night. Early next morning they started afoot on the last lap of the ascent, where all the difficult climbing comes in, because of the altitude and cold and winds. The child walked the entire distance unaided.

At the summit, which was reached about noon, she appeared less fatigued than her mother.

LISTEN TO THIS, YOUNGSTERS!

No Exams, No Home Work in These Public Schools.

Evanston Superintendent Announces New Regime Which Includes Music, Folk Dances and Movies.

Evanston, Ill.—Music is just as important as the multiplication table and folk dancing is as great a spur to youthful brains as is geography, in the opinion of Frederick W. Nichols, superintendent of school district No. 76, comprising the South Evanston schools, who announced a new regime for the Lincoln, Oakton, Central and Washington grade schools.

The four schools will be open to the pupils from 8:30 o'clock in the morning until ten at night. Classes will last until 3:30 in the afternoon, but pupils will be permitted to go home at any hour their parents desire.

"I am going to eliminate home work," said Superintendent Nichols. "It is the bugbear of school children. And there will be no examinations; they merely worry the youngsters. The students will do all their scholastic work right in the classrooms."

In addition, the schools will remain open until ten o'clock in the evening for special classes in manual training, music, languages, art, dramatics, athletic games, folk dances, domestic science and movies. The parents will be invited to come to these classes with their children.

"Examinations are an unhealthy, antiquated tyranny," added Superintendent Nichols. "Growing children should not be compelled to sit in classrooms all day and then lug books home for night lessons. You can't get an estimate of a child's mental equipment by insisting that he cram a lot of facts in his head and scribble as many as he can remember on the semester exam papers."

Just a Little Smile

POLITE PREDICTION.

"Didn't you tell me I was going to get that appointment?" inquired the constituent.

"I believe I did," replied Senator Sorghum.

"You haven't yet kept your promise."

"My friend, I didn't mean it as a promise. It was only an optimistic prophecy."

Going Too Far.

"I was sorry to see that you fell asleep during Professor Diggs' lecture."

"So I did," replied Mr. Dubwaite.

"Couldn't you follow him?"

"I followed him back to Babylon, but when he said, 'We will now jump back 50,000 years.' I couldn't negotiate the distance."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Womanly Foresight.

"Maud wouldn't say a word to the reporter about her case unless he'd promise to print her picture."

"Vanity, I suppose."

"No; business. She says that in her previous divorce case her photograph got her a new husband almost immediately."

Superior Force.

Professor (in mechanics)—What is a couple?

Student—Two equal parallel forces acting in the same direction.

Professor—But if they act in opposite directions?

Student—That's a divorce case.—Judge.

Depressing Conditions.

Doctor—Your trouble is dyspepsia; you should laugh heartily before and after your meals.

Patient—Impossible, doctor. I cook them myself and then I wash the dishes.—Boston Transcript.

IT'S AN ILL WIND, ETC.

"I'm rather surprised that Mrs. P., could get those swell society folks to attend her dinners."

"Well, the high cost of living helped to overcome scruples, I suppose."

A Tale With a Point.

On the Safe Side.

Agent—The lady would like to rent the house furnished. She has three boys—

Owner—Add the value of the furniture to the rent.—Boston Transcript.

No Claim.

Mrs. Wolsingham—Is she in high society?

Mrs. Westervelt—No, indeed. Why, she hasn't been divorced even once.

Of Course.

Johnnie—Father, I want to know something.

Father—Well, what is it, my boy?

Johnnie—Do people keep goats in a buttery?—Answers.

Plenty of Will.

"I'm going to stop smoking."

"You haven't the will power."

"The deuce I haven't! Why, I've quit three times already this month."

Transients All.

"How many servants does Mrs. Blank keep?"

"None. Her record for the year, so far, is fourteen she didn't keep."

An Expert.

"Have you had much experience as a chauffeur?"

"Well, the last divorce case I was witness in was my seventeenth."

Between Girls.

"Why, you're in mourning, and still you want to go to the ball?"

"Well, one carries sorrow in the heart, not in the feet."

Hopeless Case.

"Why did you let that new salesman go?"

"He was incompetent."

"Yes?"

"Why, that fellow couldn't sell a motor car to a man who had just struck oil."

A Note of Discouragement.

"Do you think boys ought to study the classics?"

"I guess so," replied Farmer Corntossel. "Anything to keep them 'out of mischief!"

A Rare Sight.

"How did you enjoy your visit in Piunkville?"

"Very well. My little boy had a chance to see something he may never witness again."

"And what was that?"

"A parade of horse-drawn vehicles."

Giving Dad Away.

Lady Guest—Your father is such a hospitable man. He dearly loves a full house, doesn't he?

Son and Heir—Well, yes, if it happens to be on his side of the table.

The End of a Feud

By MARTHA MACWILLIAMS.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Miss Sue dropped in upon the gossiper, Mrs. Manny, while that lady was washing up breakfast things to say breathlessly: "Must be some truth in this talk of the world coming to an end! Actually Liza Brown came to church last night with a beau—and who should the beau be but Prof. McGoodin!"

"No!" Mrs. Manny cried. "Don't ask me to believe that! Why, she'd run if a man more than said 'Howdy' to her—and as for him— why, Brother Ben says he never recognizes the existence of anything in less than six syllables."

"I know, but I saw them—plain. Be sure they made one stir in church. Don't believe ten people heard the tect, much less the sermon," said Miss Sue. "It was funny after dismissal—everybody standing stock still a minute, as though waiting for bride and groom to go down the aisle. And how they stared—out of eye-corners, you may say. No telling how long they would have kept it up, hadn't been for Jeff Davis Perry. He may be wild, but he knows what to do in a pinch, so here he steps out, beckons the other boys just the least bit—and there they had the whole congregation moving. Liza and the professor were beet-red, knowing what it all meant—but when they had melted into the crowd they seemed not to mind. How I know is, I walked home right behind 'em."

"What did they talk about?" Mrs. Manny broke in.

Miss Sue giggled. "Stars, and the Chaldees, and the Babe in the Manger," she said. "Oh, he's got words a plenty, when he has the mind for 'em. Then stars really belonged last night—they were so big and bright, and looked to be just above the treetops."

"I do wonder—will that be a go?" Mrs. Manny answered reflectively. "Nothing to hinder. Liza has got a nice property, besides her home. And he has money in the Building an' Loan—besides what he gets for fooling with bugs and snails and things at the laboratory."

"Mrs. Parley Pindar knows all that—better'n we do, I reckon," said Miss Sue. "She's nosey anyway—then him boarding in the house so long—why, she's Jerry-on-the-spot."

"She always is—about other people's business," Mrs. Manny commented acidly. "But did you ever hear how she spoke to him down town one day—and had to tell him who she was?"

Miss Sue nodded, saying: "I call that rich. She can't have her claws on him very deep. But, mark my word, she'll hold to him like grim death. Somebody ought to tell Liza—she's so shy and home-keeping, I doubt if she has ever heard a word."

Multiply this conversation by near half the houses in Hillside—result, Hillside's amazement over the church going. Before next Sunday bets were laid on the event—covertly, because Jeff Davis Perry took it upon himself to discountenance vigorously any making of the nascent romance a sporting event. His word carried weight, socially and financially, albeit he was under thirty, and given to minding his own business. Somehow standing up for those who could not stand up for themselves appeared to him a vital part of his business. Men ought to fight their own battles—therefore McGoodin did not count. But Miss Liza, a faded, pretty thing, close upon forty, withered in the shadow of a stern paralytic mother until the time of love and mating was past, appealed to his manhood. She had nobody nearer than a banker-cousin who thought the whole duty of a kinsman was keeping Liza from wasting her substance in charity and asking her to dinner at Christmas and Thanksgiving. She always declined the invitations—what she did then was something between her and sundry pensioners. Nep and Jim, the loyal black pair, who served her as they had done her mother, could have told fine tales, but they held to the silence they felt due the queer doings of quality white folks.

Jeff Davis was the more bound to her service by the ancient feud between their grandfathers. It had been bitter enough, bloody enough, in the old time to divide a church and disrupt a political campaign. As a very small boy Jeff Davis had been taught to hate the name of Jones. As a man he laughed at that old rancor. However, Miss Liza might feel her name should not be bandied about by light tongues.

She came to church Sunday night as usual—but alone. And Jeff Davis took it upon himself to walk home with her. He had his reward, for seated on the steps was a beautiful, forlorn something which cried plaintively: "If you're Cousin Liza do please let me in! I've knocked till my knuckles are sore and nobody comes."

"Nep sleeps like the dead," Miss Liza interrupted, Jeff Davis the meanwhile busy with her key, but not busy enough to keep from hearing the strange girl run on: "You don't know me but you know my name—I'm Jones—Sarah Southly—and I've run away to you because——"

There she stopped abruptly—the hall light, left burning, flooded; thus she saw Jeff Davis plain—as he also saw the creature of his dreams. The dream-creature held out a hand to him, saying: "Of all things! To find you this way!" Then to Miss Liza: "You look kind enough to help us. I'm here because Aunt Penny vows I'll deserve death unless I give up Jeffy—all on account of some foolishness so long back everybody ought to have forgotten it."

"But—but Cousin Penny is your legal guardian. I don't know what to do," Miss Liza gasped out, "except this—to take you in and give you some supper, then put you to bed. You look fit to drop."

"Carried unanimously—with three cheers," Jeff Davis said before the girl could speak—the part about the rousing cheers was quite underbreath. He took both the girl's trembling hands and half carried her inside. But when he would have explained to Miss Liza she was not there. Very shortly she came back, led them to the dining room, stately with its dark mahogany and old silver. A table richly spread invited appetite. Love may take away appetite—but these lovers, being human and healthy, ate rejoicingly, looking happily at each other, while Miss Liza busied herself with the coffee—it had not boiled, though she set the electric percolator going first thing.

"Now you must tell me everything, both of you," she said when she had set cups steaming fragrantly before them. "It's just like a maze—a puzzle I'm just beginning to see through." Jeff Davis began: "How was I to know Sarah Southly, with whom I fell in love at first sight, was part Jones? Mrs. Gribble—Aunt Penny—wouldn't let me come to the house—but would not, either, give me a reason. Now I understand. It was the family feud. Do you"—to Miss Liza—"feel that it ought to stand between us?"

"No! A hundred times no!" Miss Liza cried standing up. "It has done harm enough without that. I say, no more living sacrifices. I myself am one."

"Can you tell us?" Jeff Davis asked, awed, when he thought she could go on.

"Yes—it takes such a little while," she said wanly. "You know, I'm a Jones inbred—mother and father were cousins. And—and when I was just seventeen I met and loved Arthur Perry, your uncle," to Jeff Davis. "He asked mother if we might marry—father was dead—and she grew so furious with him—with me—it brought on her stroke. After that I couldn't leave her—Arthur said so himself. He was killed in the troubles over Cuba."

"I know," Jeff Davis said, reverently clasping Sarah's hand. Miss Liza laid her own hand over theirs, saying tremulously: "I am going to have you married this night. When that is done we'll let Aunt Penny know all about it."

Disappearance of Lakes.

Whether the globe on which we dwell is gradually drying up or not is a question that has been much debated. Recent discoveries in central Asia have been regarded by some as favoring an affirmative answer, but others have replied that the observed phenomena are simply periodic changes. One authority champions the affirmative view on the ground that a great number of European lakes have certainly disappeared within the last 250 years. The canton of Zurich, for example, had 149 lakes a quarter of a century ago, and only 76 today. It is believed by some that a similar tendency to disappear has affected the lakes of Germany and Russia.

Crude Methods of Defense.

Pueblo Indians were never warriors, but in the old days they were subject to frequent attacks by the wandering tribes, such as the Apaches and the Navajos. Therefore many of the crude adobe houses were built with portholes up near the roof, which the occupants used to defend themselves from the attackers. Many of these old houses are still standing, and portholes are still there, just as they were years and years ago. Of course they are all occupied, for no new houses are built unless there is an absolute necessity for them.

Reason Enough.

"Why," indignantly asked the prospective customer, as he looked at the ancient relic of the pioneer days of motordom, "did you advertise this reminiscence as a 'late model?'"

"Well, anybody who drives it will never get anywhere on time, that's a cinch."—Retail Ledger, Philadelphia.

HORROR BEYOND ANY FICTION

Grand Guignol plays are outdone by a drama enacted at Vilna a short time ago, an exchange states. An inmate of the local asylum died and the coffined body was taken into the chapel. Another lunatic, who had seen the body of his comrade carried away, stole into the chapel, took the body from the coffin and put it in the cupboard used to keep the church furniture. This done, he lay down in the coffin, covered himself with a shroud and fell asleep. A few hours later a priest arrived and conducted a requiem service. When it was finished bearers lifted the coffin to take it away for the burial. The motion woke the madman, who jumped out, struck one of the bearers a blow on the head and ran away.

The bearer collapsed and died from fright, while the priest and the others fled panic-stricken. Their cries brought a crowd to the chapel entrance. Eventually some of the bravest ventured inside to ascertain what had happened. They found an empty coffin and a dead man on the floor, and naturally put the corpse into the coffin. They then began to search for the shroud, which the madman had taken away with him. One of the searchers opened the cupboard in the hope of finding something fit to cover the body. Directly he did so the hidden dead man fell on him head first and knocked him down. The live man fainted from fright, and panic again filled the chapel, the crowd rushing out and scattering through the city. It was only after several hours' work by the police that the matter was cleared up.

Character Told by the Nose.

A turned-up nose indicates cheerfulness and somewhat of a chatter-box. A bulging nose, from tip to root, with graceful lines, denotes wit. The hawk nose denotes brain power rather than strength of character; it can be mean, sullen and pessimistic. A pinched, thin nose flaring out at base with expanding nostrils is apt to be voluptuous.

THIS YEAR'S COATS ARE RICH AND VARIED

WHEN the question of a new coat for winter comes up it is going to be amicably settled, for coats, in becomingness and comfort, are all that the heart could wish. Starting out with beautiful fabrics, in quiet colors, joining forces with fur in collars, cuffs and trimming, taking to themselves rich embroideries, this year's coats are of a richness and elegance that is sure to please. In addition to these things, coats are made in at least four distinct styles, with an occasional model that differs from those that may be classed under one of four types.

The coat at the left of the two pictured is made of brown duvetyn and trimmed with brown caracul fur in bands that extend up the front, around the collar and on the sleeves. The skirt portion is also banded, with the back overlapping the sides and defined by a fur band that extends to the waistline. The novel, high collar is not neglected in this generous dispensation of fur and is a feature that absorbs much of the coat designer's attention, like the wide sleeves that are characteristic of this season. In the coat pictured they have a plaiting of the fabric below the band of fur as a finish.

In the model at the right the coat simulates a long blouse, and its full sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs. Its capacious collar is embroidered and may be brought up and fastened about the throat. In black velours, or similar cloths, with gray embroidery, it would be hard to excel this wrap.

SPIRITED AND LOVELY HATS SMILE IN FACE OF WINTER

THE melancholy days have come as usual, but they are having a hard time of it. These are the days when we meet our best friends returning from the milliner's with a hatbox in hand and a smile of satisfaction radiating about them that no melancholy day can eclipse. It is because in the endless variety of hats there is one for every type of face—one that enhances its good points, is kind to its faults and has a charm to lend to its wearer.

The majority of shapes for fall are medium or small and they are graceful and spirited. Hats reveal much hand-work and employ many materials and trimmings. Among materials, duvetyn and similar fabrics rival velvet and there are familiar and unfamiliar trimmings, the latter including small metallic and cellophane ornaments. Cire ribbons and laces are featured and ostrich returns to favor in plumes and "fancies"—that is, ornaments made of ostrich flues—sometimes platined or metallized.

The group of hats pictured begins with a small shape covered with any of the millinery fabrics and supporting one of those long ostrich bands just described. It is shown in several colors and one can imagine its becomingness when the face is snuggled down among the soft flues that encircle it. The spirited Napoleon at the right covered with velvet appropriates a fine lace veil, narrow cire ribbon and ornaments that have the appearance of jet in its up-to-date trimming. It is an exponent of the brilliance of black in these materials. Another hat, below it, bears witness to the cleverness of velvet drapery and wide cire ribbon in accomplishing a sparkling bit of headwear in spite of its all-blackness. The little hat covered with panne velvet at the lower left of the group is a great favorite. It begins its career with a very interesting frame and ends it with a smart, upstanding feather ornament of ostrich flues that is decidedly military in style. A hat built on an intricate frame finishes the group. It is covered with velvet and small, metallic, oblong ornaments are clasped over its edges.

Braided Serge.

Considerable braid trimming is always seen on early autumn and spring things. These are the seasons when most women turn to the practical and serviceable blue serge—and nothing has definitely taken the place of braid as a trimming for this fabric.

Straps on Shoes.

Straps have become almost universal on the new shoe designs as they once were in the family woodshed. The arrangement of these adjuncts to the shoe for fall are extremely varied and some do not buckle or fasten at all but are stitched tight at either end, a rubber inset underneath giving the necessary snugness. Tongues, which carping critics aver are a necessary adjunct of any feminine shoe, are given additional prominence and are heavily ornamented. Some models are extremely large and pointed and have appliqued strips of contrasting color outlining the shape. A wide range of variety in color and material is given by shoes of velvet, brocade and fur.

Chamois Gloves.

Chamois gloves can be washed nicely in warm water with pure soap. Ordinary soap will not do. They should not be wrung out. Rinse them thoroughly, for any soap left in them is discoloring.

SOME MORE EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS.

When one has a little leftover veal the following dish will be one worth considering.

Veal Stew.—Cut the remains of roast or cutlets into small morsels. Cover with cold water and cook over the simmering burner till very tender; add any remnants of gravy or of forcemeat and more seasonings if needed and bring to the boiling point. Thicken with a tablespoonful of flour or less of corn starch and cook ten minutes after adding.

Dumplings.—Take one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and buttermilk to make a drop batter. Fresh milk may be used, adding a tablespoonful of butter to the flour mixture.

Potato Turnovers.—To one pint of hot mashed potato, seasoned well with salt, butter, cream and beaten egg, add one tablespoonful of flour and shape into round cakes rather thin. Place one tablespoonful of finely minced meat on top and fold over, pressing the edges together. Brush the top with egg and milk. Bake in a hot oven until well browned. Serve piping hot with Brown Sauce.—Put one tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and when brown add one tablespoonful of flour, mix and then add one cupful of hot stock with salt and pepper with onion juice if desired for seasoning. A half cupful of finely minced mushrooms will be an addition.

Cream Scones.— Take one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of butter well rubbed into the flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one well beaten egg and thin cream to make a mixture that will roll out, keeping it as moist as possible. Cut in diamond shapes, brush with egg, sprinkle with sugar and bake in a hot oven.

Coffee Creams.—Take one cupful each of strong coffee and thin cream, one-half cupful of milk, four eggs beaten until well mixed, four tablespoonfuls of sugar and a pinch of salt. Cook in cups set in hot water, baked in a moderate oven. Serve cold. Nice with scones.

The world is all dark or the world is all bright,
Just as we choose to make it;
Our burden is heavy, our burden is light,
Just as we happen to take it;
And people who grumble and people who groan
At the world and every proposal
Would grumble and groan if the world were their own
With sun, moon and stars at disposal. —Harriet Swift.

DELICIOUS FRUIT.

We enjoy the delicate flavor as well as the beautiful color and aroma of our early fall fruits, but do we appreciate the wonderful color possibilities in the fruits we take as a matter of course? Try some of these when something dainty is needed to make an especial appeal to the appetite:

Muskmelon With Cream.—Scrub small melons of a deep orange meat and dry well; then cut in halves, removing the seeds. Cut nearly to the center with a sharp knife, making six or eight sharp-pointed petals, which will look like a golden lily. Place in the center a ball of any ice or ice cream, dust with cocoa or sprinkle with nuts, as desired.

When serving a half of a musk melon, select good ripe ones, wash them and chill well before serving. Serve on a bed of cracked ice. Do not put ice in the melon cavity, it dilutes the juice and destroys the delicate flavor.

Muskmelon Surprise.—Prepare muskmelons as above, cut in halves, scoop out the seeds and fill with watermelon balls. Use a good-sized potato cutter and scoop out the balls in the heart of the melon.

Strawberries a la Francaise.—Place a mound of powdered sugar in the center of a small glass or china plate and arrange around it a border of washed and drained, but unhulled strawberries. Serve for a luncheon beginning or for breakfast. The mound of sugar is made by pressing the sugar into a small glass or mold and unmolding on the plate.

Orange Salad.—Peel the oranges, freeing them from the white bitter principle lining the peel. Slice each orange into thin slices, arrange them in overlapping slices, garnish with candied cherries and serve with roast wild duck.

Muskmelon Cocktail.—Cut the melon in cubes or balls with a potato scoop, arrange in glasses, and pour over a heavy sirup, cooled, made by boiling a cupful of sugar and one-fourth of a cupful of water until smooth and thick. Then grate a generous sprinkling of nutmeg over the melon and serve.

FASHIONS IN WINTER FURS

Wide Diversity Shown in Styles of Peltry to Have Milady's Favor for Coming Season.

A passing glance at the fur garments displayed shows a wide diversity in style. There is no set fashion even in silhouette. One wrap may have close-fitting capes that form the long straight lines, while the next garment may be developed in wide, outstanding circular effects. There are many charming models and those built on the lines of a cape are popular. It is quite certain that there will be no difficulty in expressing individuality in the furs we wear next winter.

It is apparent that black fur garments will be especially favored. Handsome models in caracul, baby lamb, Hudson seal and astrakhan are plentiful. Next to black the gray furs will be in demand, so there are charming models in mole and squirrel. Of course, the beautiful mink coats and wraps will continue to be worn for evening functions.

A new fur which is a mixture of chinchilla and opossum is shown in trimmings and is also used in wraps in combination with fur fabrics. In neckpieces the animal skins seem to be the first choice. The pointed fox and fisher are being shown in large quantities, and there are handsome models in sitka and white fox.

Frocks for Tiny Tots.

Frocks for little girls are adorably dainty. Those of organdy in white, with pipings, folds or frills in contrasting color and with wee embroidered wreaths or bouquets to match, are to conjure fairies with. The short full skirts, the pantalettes peeping underneath, the hats, sometimes to match the costume; any little girl wearing these could conquer the whole world of hearts.

HIGHWAYMEN STEAL AUTO

Held up by two men he had given a ride along the road shortly after 12 o'clock Saturday morning, near Newark, Robert W. Webb, of 1224 Vandever Avenue, Wilmington, was compelled to surrender his wallet containing $40 in cash, a gold watch and his automobile, a Stearns, valued at $2,000. As Webb got out of the machine one of the men kept a revolver leveled at his head, and threatened to shoot if he attempted to interfere with them.

Webb, who was on his way to Washington, D. C., reported to the police that about five miles from Newark, two young men walking on the road waved their arms for him to stop and asked him for a ride. They said they were going to Newark and Webb invited them to jump in. They climbed in the tonneau. About a mile from Newark, Webb heard a voice saying: "Now stop the machine and hold up your hands." He glanced back and saw one of the men pointing the gun at his head, while the other started to climb to the front seat.

One man searched Webb's pockets, while the other kept him covered with the weapon. Then they ordered him to "beat it."

"We'll take care of the automobile, don't worry," one of them called back as they sped away, leaving Webb alone on the road. Webb walked to Newark and notified the authorities there and then telephoned the Wilmington police.

Sunday morning as State Detective Baldwin and City Detective Mahoney, of Wilmington, were scouring the vicinity of Newark for little Charles Wright they came upon the frame of a burned automobile. Examination of the license tags showed that it was the automobile stolen from Webb earlier in the morning. The machine was burned beyond repair. A farmer who lives a hundred yards from the place where the burned machine was discovered, said he had not heard any unusual noises.

Webb was unable to give more than a vague description of the men. Both appeared to be about 30 years old, and were dressed in dark suits, one wearing a hat and the other a cap, he said.

TO LOWER TAX BURDEN

Governor William D. Denney has accepted the invitation of the National Budget Committee to become honorary chairman for Delaware in that organization's nation-wide efforts to gain popular support of the efforts of Gen. Charles G. Dawes, director of the Budget, to effect a reduction of the burden of Federal Taxation.

Announcement of the acceptance of the Governor was made recently by John T. Pratt, chairman of the National Budget Committee, whose headquarters are at 7 West Eighth street, New York City. Governor Denney will join with the executives of other states in fostering the spirit of popular approval of the policy of federal retrenchment.

Active heads of local committees are being selected daily from among the most prominent business and professional men in their respective communities, and efforts are under way to secure the co-operation of leading citizens in a thousand cities by the formation of a nation-wide "Budget Guard" whose members will simply pledge their support to the establishment of a business-like administration of governmental appropriations and expenditures.

Every member of the National Budget Committee, which was instrumental in initiating and passing the National Budget Bill, is asked to urge upon his fellow citizens the necessity for solidly supporting the present program of governmental efficiency and economy by the elimination of every possible item of unnecessary expenditure. Every taxpayer who favors a reduction of the present unbearable tax burden is invited to join with their fellow townsmen in helping to crystallize public opinion and defeat unnecessary additions to federal expense.

Henry P. Scott, of Wilmington, is active state chairman for Delaware, Mayor LeRoy Harvey, of Wilmington, is honorary chairman.

KU KLUX KLAN GROWING

The Ku Klux Klan in Delaware is not even pausing in its plan to secure strong State and local organizations here in spite of the sensational articles that the Philadelphia, New York and other big metropolitan newspapers have been publishing, charging its discrimination against Jews, Catholics and Negroes. Many are joining in Delaware to judge from statements made by S. R. Wolf, one of the "Kleages" or organizers, for Delaware.

Mr. Wolfe declared that in one morning's mail alone he had received 92 applications for memberships in the Klan. He said a meeting was held in Wilmington, Friday night, at which a number of members were received. Mr. Wolf would not name the place of meeting nor give the number of members received on Friday night. He declared that C. B. North, King Kleagle for Delaware, is meeting with success everywhere in organizing branches in Dover, Middletown, Wilmington, Milford and Seaford.

How much excitement the movement is creating generally may be judged by an incident that happened one day last week at Dover. Odd Fellows Hall, on Lockerman street, in Dover was rented for a night by an organization that refused to reveal its identity. Immediately the residents of Dover became interested, and, in the absence of any other logical surmise came to the conclusion that it must be the Dover branch of the K. K. K. which had organized there.

In the classified advertising colums of one of the afternoon papers this advertisement appears: ARE YOU A REAL AMERICAN? Write P. O. Box 899, Wilmington, for KU KLUX KLAN information. Sept. 15-3t.

Wolf admitted that he had inserted it as part of the plan to organize the Klan in Delaware. He declined to give his address in Wilmington because of threats that have been made against him.

DELA. TO TRAIN TEACHERS

With the opening of the University of Delaware an attempt will be made to acquaint students more fully than heretofore with the opportunity being offered for the preparation of high school teachers. The marked increase in teachers' salaries during the last two or three years together with the lessened opportunity for lucrative employment in other fields has tended to attract college graduates in greater numbers to the teaching profession. It is a matter of regret, however, that quite a number of this year's graduates of the men's college of the University of Delaware who sought teaching positions were barred from appointment because they had not had the necessary professional training. Professor R. W. Heim, State director of vocational education, reports that eight of this year's graduates in agriculture became eager to secure employment as teachers of agriculture but could not be certificated because they had failed to take the specific courses required by law for teaching, in federally aided agricultural departments and high schools. Dean E. Laurence Smith reports a number of similar instances among arts and science graduates. The point is that high school teaching is now regarded as a profession and graduation from college without regard to the courses taken no longer entitles the graduate to a teacher's license without examination. A limited amount of professional training along with graduation from college is now required in practically every State for certification to teach in high schools. Professor W. A. Wilkinson, head of the Department of Education of the University of Delaware has investigated the legal requirements in a number of States and has arranged a series of courses designed to meet these requirements. In justice to the students, therefore, an attempt will be made to inform them to the end that they may if they choose, elect such courses as will qualify them to teach in the event that they should decide to engage in teaching either permanently or temporarily. This it is thought will prevent the re-occurrence of the confusion and disappointment that has happened in a number of instances in recent years.
